Top Cop Bill Bratton Comes Out for Ban on Assault Clips

Former NYPD Commish and LAPD Chief calls opposition to ban “reckless and wrong”

Citizens Crime Commission of NYC launches database connecting all major mass shootings in America to assault clips

NEW YORK-Legendary former NYPD Commissioner and LAPD Chief Bill Bratton is coming down hard on the side of law enforcement in favor of H.R. 308, the ban on large capacity ammunition magazines (aka: assault clips). Bratton joins the Citizens Crime Commission of New York City’s growing coalition of law enforcement and allies across the country in support of this common sense measure.

"Large capacity ammunition magazines were designed as weapons of war to kill as many people as possible in the shortest period of time. Law enforcement and military go through extensive training to operate and maintain these weapons, which simply do not belong in untrained civilian hands. Richard Aborn has been a champion for common sense legislation to protect cops who risk their lives everyday to keep the public safe. Anything less is reckless and wrong," said Bratton.

In connection with Bratton’s announcement, the Crime Commission launched an online database of significant mass shootings in America (defined by the FBI as at least 4 victims killed), all of which involve assault clips. The database catalogues 22 major recent incidents, with detailed information about the weapons, magazine capacity, and circumstances of the shooting itself. Data also indicates that mass shootings occur consistently throughout regions of the United States, further underscoring the need for federal legislation. The increased lethality of such incidents is made possible by the use of assault clips which enable a shooter to rapidly fire off as many as 100-rounds without having to reload the firearm, often shooting at police. Since the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) does not require police departments to report data on magazine capacity, the Crime Commission’s database is a valuable resource.

“No one has done more to reduce crime and improve policing than Bill Bratton, but Congress has a responsibility to protect cops from gratuitous violence too. The growing momentum of support from law enforcement across the country should send a clear message: this isn't about Republicans or Democrats, it's about helping cops do their job to keep the public safe," said Richard M. Aborn, President of the Citizens Crime Commission of New York City.

As the former President of the Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence (1993-1996), Richard Aborn was the principle strategist behind the original ban in 1994 which passed into law with support from Bratton. Assault clips (defined as more than 10-rounds) were made illegal as part of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act, commonly known as the federal assault weapons ban, but Congress failed to renew the ban when it expired in 2004. A large capacity ammunition magazine was used to carry out the recent shooting in Tucson, allowing the gunman to fire more than 30 bullets in 15 seconds.
